February 8, 2018

This survey was administered online via Qualtrics from October 26 to December 14, 2015. Respondents were recruited via Amazon.com’s Mechanical Turk, Facebook advertisements, and a Qualtrics Internet panel, each limited to residents of India ages 18 and older. The research was generously supported by a grant from the Hariri Institute for Computational Science and Engineering at Boston University. Approval was obtained from the Institutional Review Board of Boston University (protocol 3891X).

The survey is further described, and the results analyzed, in Taylor C. Boas, Dino P. Christenson, and David M. Glick, “Recruiting Large Online Samples in the United States and India: Facebook, Mechanical Turk and Qualtrics,” Political Science Research and Methods, forthcoming.

This codebook corresponds to two data files in the replication archive: india.RData, which contains the cleaned survey data, and india_completions_augmented.RData, which merges in additional data from outside sources and eliminates partial survey completions.

Q1. Please read this brief introduction before accepting the invitation.

You are being invited to participate in a research study of Indian public opinion. The purpose of the study is to understand how different groups of people think about national issues. If you agree to participate, completing the questionnaire will take approximately 10 minutes. Participation is completely voluntary and you can stop the survey at any time. Your answers will be completely anonymous. Under no circumstances will information be published that could identify you. The results of the study will be published in academic articles and/or books.

[shown if sample = Facebook] After finishing the last question, you can indicate if you want to participate in a drawing for an iPad Mini. One winner will be chosen among every 1000 people that complete the survey. To enter the drawing, you will need to provide your name and email, which will be maintained in a separate database so that it is impossible to link them to your answers to the survey. There is a small risk that your name and email address could be publicly revealed. However, we will minimize this risk by encrypting the names and emails, protecting them with a password, and deleting them after the drawing.

[shown if sample = MTurk] After finishing the last question, you will be provided with a code. To get paid for your work you must enter this code into the box on the Mechanical Turk HIT page. Keep this code safe and confidential. This code is proof of your participation and it is required for your payment on Mechanical Turk. There is a small risk that completion codes could be publicly revealed. However, we will minimize this risk by encrypting completion codes, protecting them with a password, and deleting them after the drawing.
